Challenge: When an existing user creates and shares a giving fund, HMW teach invitees about Kiva's mission and impact to the extent needed for them to feel great about giving?

Insight: We went through 3 quick rounds of feedback on User Testing to iterate on this content. This testing flagged a broad comprehension issue:

- When we talk about a fundraising goal, and a fund, and Kiva, and several borrowers on one page, people new to Kiva get confused about the relationship between all these entities and what the page is even for
- This creates a risk that we'll take what started as an easy social ask ("can you support my birthday fundraiser?") and add enough friction to make users doubt their decision to support their friend

Recommendation: Don't rely solely on the new impact module to help people understand Kiva. If we're going to talk more about Kiva, we also need to make changes to the copy and information hierarchy to more clearly convey that the fund organizer is raising money for Kiva, a nonprofit. → Link to prototype

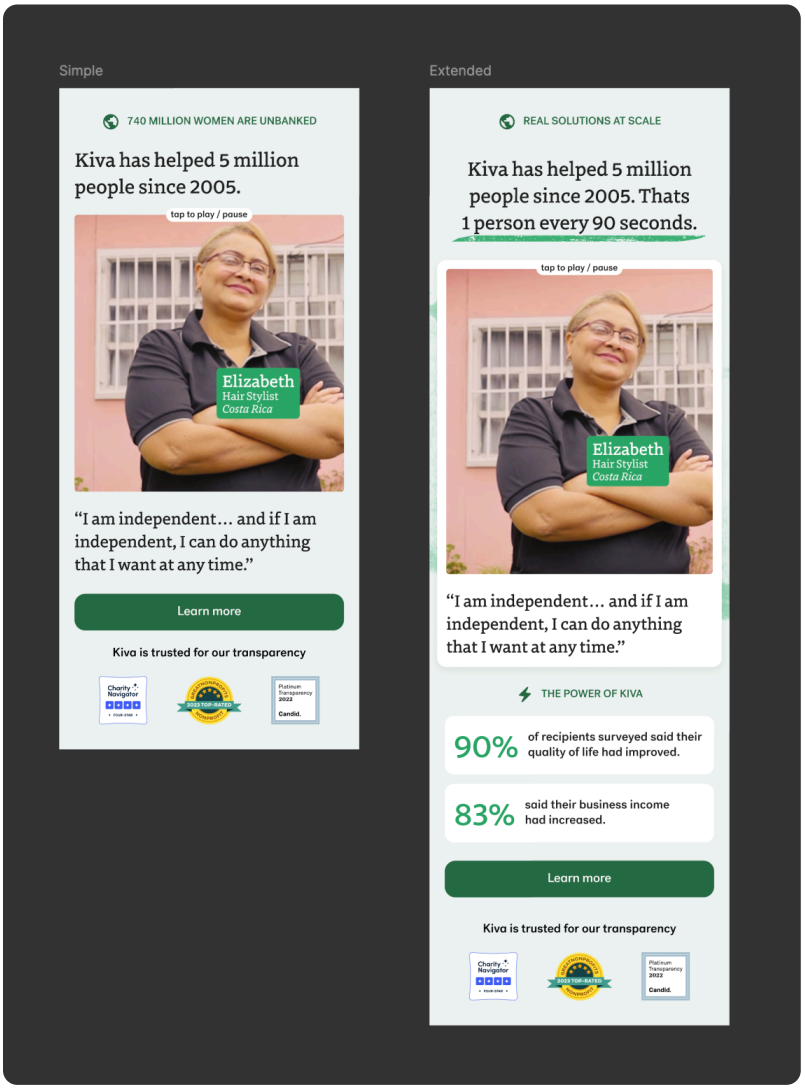
Round 1

Overview

Objective: Compare results across variants to choose the layout that maximizes perception of

- Credibility - Confidence in giving to the cause
- Important problem - Understanding of the need
- Effective solution - Understanding of Kiva's role in that
- Comprehension - Does the inclusion of the impact section cause any comprehension issues (eg. confusion around how this content relates to the rest of the page)

Structure: Each user saw one of the following. They were instructed to play the video at the end (if they had not done so on their own).

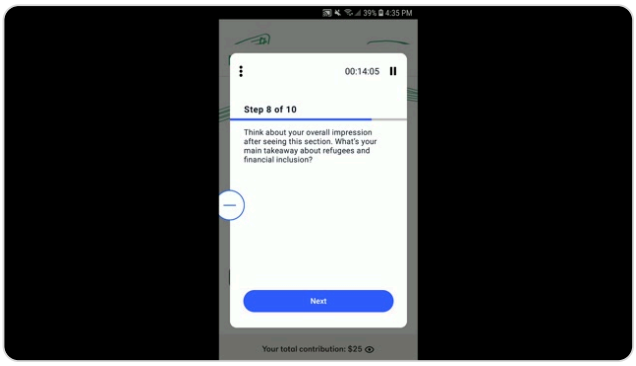


Results

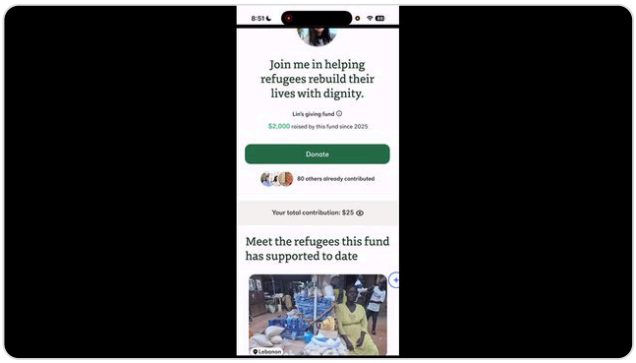
Important problem

⭐ More participants who saw the shorter version with a stat for # of unbanked women commented on the scale or importance of the problem. Some thought this stat should be more prominent. Some participants who saw the extended variant still reached a conclusion about a broader problem, but it was less common.

Short version w/ # of unbanked women

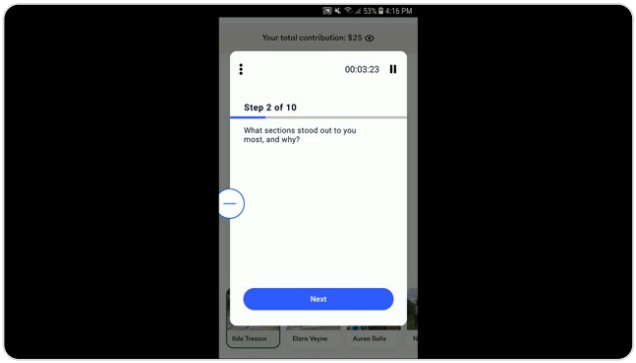


Longer version



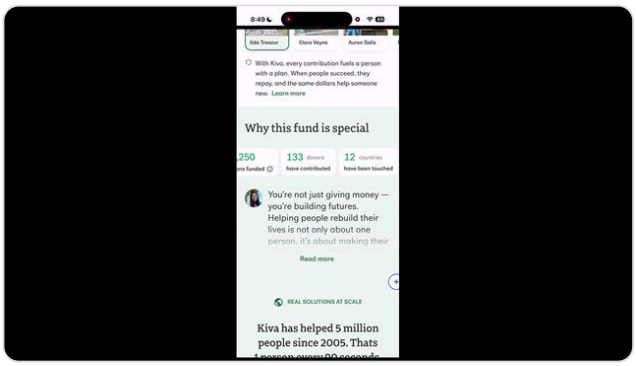
Effective solution

The stories of specific refugees were the same across variants and stood out to participants.

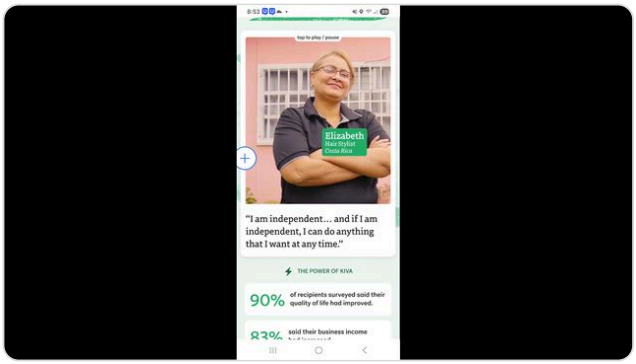


⭐ The expanded view included more statistics.

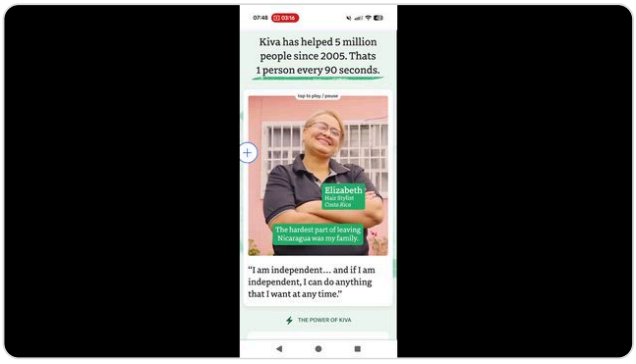
Quality of life - seen as very positive



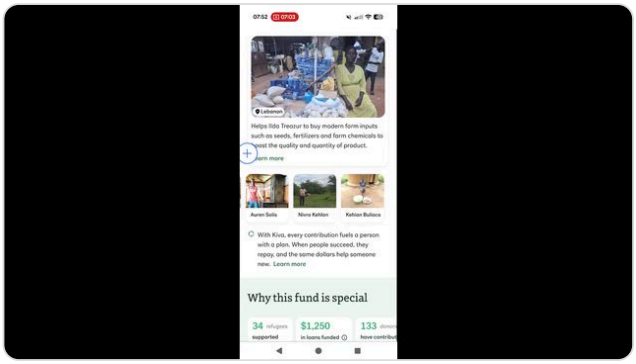
Past reach - “1 person every 90 seconds” line was memorable and added to credibility



Numbers sometimes invite questions

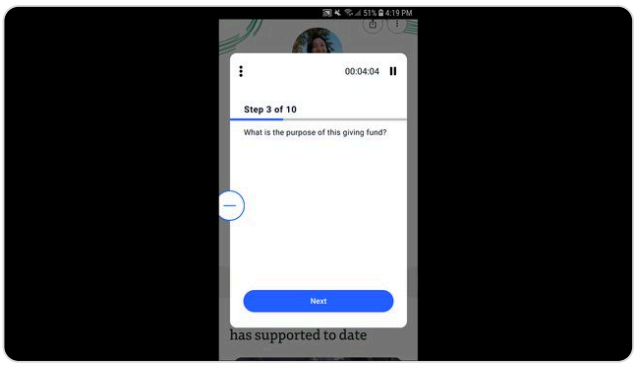


Other stats



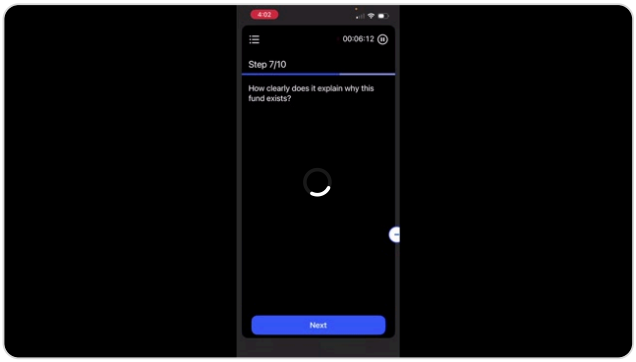
Comprehension

Participants described the purpose of the fund as “helping refugees.”



1

⭐ Participants did not conceptualize the fund and Kiva as 2 distinct things; this caused some confusion.



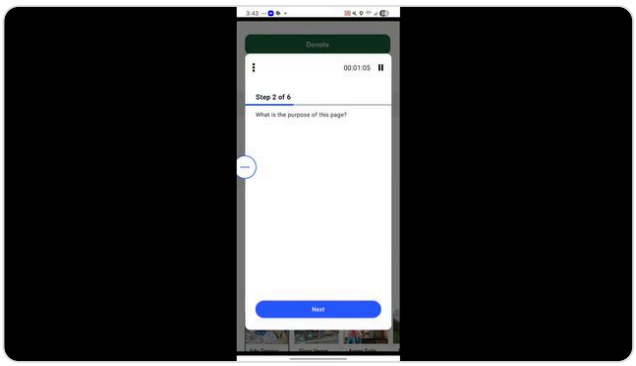
Round 2

Objective: Deep dive into comprehension. Can adjustments to headings and order of information clarify the relationship between the fund and Kiva?

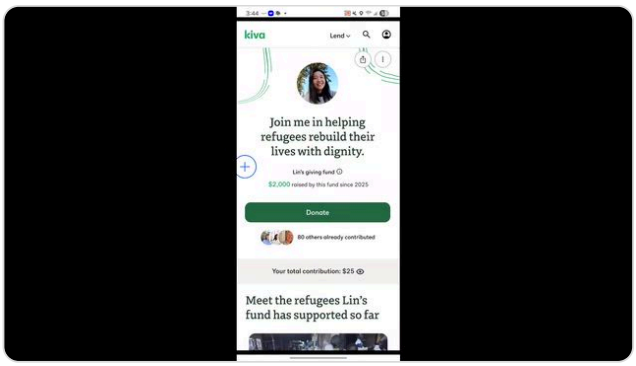
Structure: Just 1 variant tested, with more direct questions asking users to explain how it works.

Results:

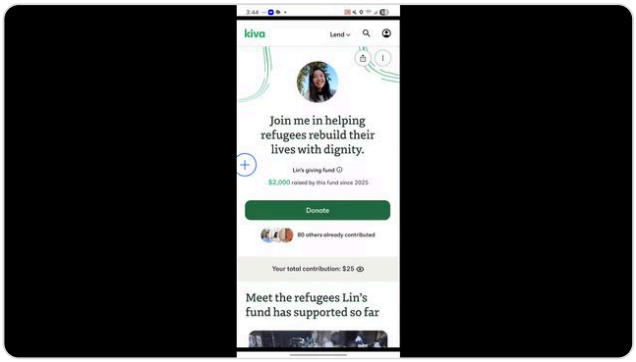
What is the purpose of this page?



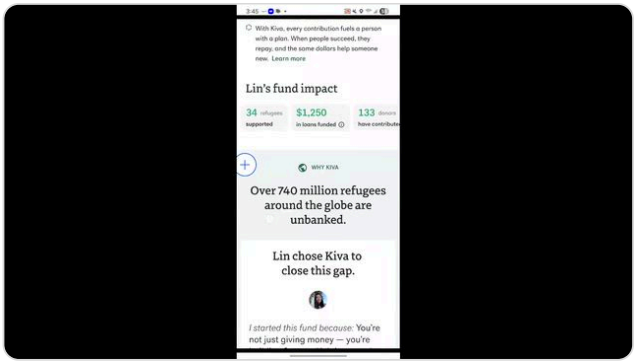
Would you feel confident about contributing to this fund? Why or why not?



⭐ What is the relationship between Lin and Kiva?



What, if anything, is confusing or unclear?



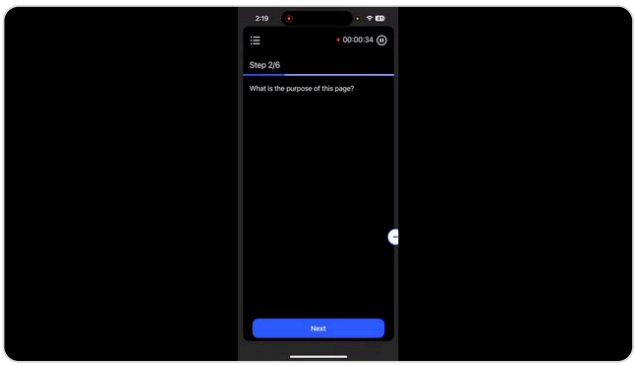
Round 3

Objective: Deep dive into comprehension. Can adjustments to headings and order of information clarify the relationship between the fund and Kiva?

Structure: Just 1 variant tested, with more direct questions asking users to explain how it works. Adjusted framing ("imagine your friend Lin shared this page...") and tweaked copy

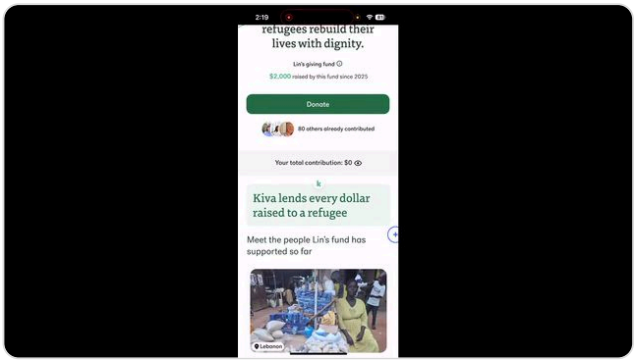
Results:

What is the purpose of this page?

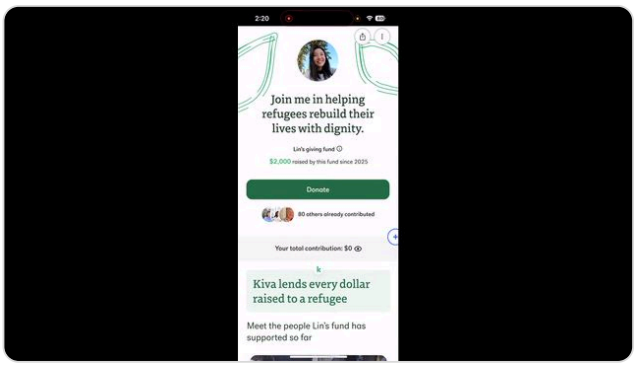


⭐ What is the relationship between Lin and Kiva?

→ I think this is coming across clearly; people understand that Lin is raising money and Kiva is deploying the funds



Would you feel confident about contributing to Lin's giving fund? Why or why not?



What, if anything, is confusing or unclear?
